Humanities' Oracle

Standing at the corner of a gigantic building.
He was worried and seemed helpless...
The only thought his mind was thinking..."
your daughter has to clear this test."
Soon she came towards him with a broad smile on her lips; he understood from her eyes it is time to give her some tips...
He knew his daughter succeeded and was going to begin a new chapter of her life...
He forgot all the loans he took and how would he be alive...
The day came when she had to leave, his final words were "take care baby and don't forget me."
Things were smooth only for some time; he got a call about what had happened to his juvenile.
Freezing was her body, hanging from a ceiling fan; her helplessness was unknown to every man.

Left alone was the unconditional love of the father,
Could not be recognised by the despondent daughter...
Broken were the dreams, cursed was the courtyard...
Amidst the shadows, life goes on, unfurled,
New stories emerge, in a vibrant world.
Though scars remain, time gently heals,
Promising hope and new dreams, life reveals...
No one waited for her except the graveyard...
After the storm, came a sunlit ray,
New beginnings dawned, lighting the way.
With memories cherished, he found his might,
Embracing life's joy, in a new hopeful light.
